Literary Banquets: Wine and Dine on the flavors of Italy with Dean Cristina Della Coletta

Friday, February 27, 2015

6:00 PM—9:00 PM

Immerse your senses in an evening of culinary exploration focused on food and its presence in Italian Literature. From Dante and Boccaccio's Medieval feasts and famines, to Renaissance Italy's Machiavelli and the Borgias, when banquets met court intrigue (and a little bit of poison), food and wine have played a sumptuous and symbolic role in classic Italian writing.

UCSD Alumni and the Ida and Cecil Green Faculty Club have teamed up to present UC San Diego Arts and Humanities Dean Cristina Della Coletta, the Chancellor's Associates Chair in Italian Literature, for a delicious dinner featuring temptations for the intellect and palate. Trace the path of culinary symbolism through Italy's greatest literature as you experience a special Italian menu with carefully selected wine pairings.

5:00 PM - 7:00 PM

Don Norman, Director, DesignLab, UC San Diego
Professor Emeritus, Cognitive Science and Psychology
*Design Lab: Attacking the Critical Problems in Society

Don claims to have flunked retirement -- twice. He joined UC San Diego in 1966 as one of the early faculty members. He served as chair of the psychology department, and later was one of the founders and chair of the Department of Cognitive Science. He retired in 1993. After retirement, he moved to Silicon Valley and was hired as vice president of advanced technology at Apple. He then worked as an executive at HP, started his own company, followed a startup to Chicago, and ended up teaching computer science at Northwestern, where he was co-director of a joint MBA-engineering program (MMM) to which he introduced design. He was also co-director of the Segal Design Institute, and co-founder of the Northwestern MS program in design and innovation. He retired from Northwestern and was happily living in Palo Alto, giving talks around the world, consulting, and serving on boards before Chancellor Pradeep K. Khosla lured him back to UCSD to bring "design" to the campus. The Chancellor's instructions: It must be important, it must be exciting.

In this Supper Club discussion, Don will discuss what the DesignLab will do to make design "important and exciting" at UCSD.

For reservations contact Jenelle Dean (858) 246-0232 or jmdean@ucsd.edu.
